VETERAN MADE POPPY –SPRING– 2012

VETERAN MADE POPPY – SPRING- 2012

Hundreds of disabled veterans are busily fashioning red crepe paper poppies – the memorial flower worn each year during Memorial Day and Veterans Day in honor of America’s war dead.

The American Legion Auxiliary pays these hospital-confined men for making little red blooms by hand—money they would not have were it not for this program.

Just a small percent of the public really know how and where the poppies they see are made. All poppies for the Department of Texas are made at the Temple VA Medical Center. The disabled men look forward to making the flowers as a relief from hospital boredom. They are also well aware that the funds derived from the poppies each year can only be used for rehabilitation and child welfare by the Auxiliary.

The large sums contributed by a sympathetic public have done untold good in alleviating suffering and hardship of the veteran and his or her family.

Order your poppies now. Remember the pleasure your work toward this effort will bring to someone less fortunate than you. Distribute and wear the poppy proudly.

NOTE: According to Convention Mandate, 1949, you are asked to send to Department thirty-three and one third percent (33 1/3%) of your poppy proceeds for Rehabilitation and Child Welfare purposes. This percentage should be based on the balance of your proceeds after deducting the amount paid for the poppies and other expenses.
